

Maritime transport and the climate change challenge

Investigation of potential climate change impacts on ports and maritime operations around the southern African coast

Rossouw, M and Theron, A.

Abstract

Climate action has become a priority on the international agenda but the challenge facing the global community is both complex and considerable. Climate change poses a serious threat to human development and prosperity with potentially wide-ranging implications for water, food and energy security, human health, infrastructure, biodiversity, migration, global trade and security.